

Chemical Attacks on female students in Iran

Education FACT SHEET

July 2023

Summary

This research examines the sexual discrimination and oppression experienced by female students in Iran, particularly within the educational system. Discriminatory practices, rooted in religious political movements and the establishment of an authoritarian regime after the Islamic Revolution of 1979, create significant barriers for female students, hindering their progress and equal treatment. The research focuses on the chain of chemical attacks on schools during the nationwide protests for “Woman life freedom” from December 2022, to April 2023.

Objectives

The aim of this research is to document 358 instances of gas poisoning in girls’ schools and shed light on the ruling powers’ efforts to suppress resistance and instill fear. These attacks aimed to disrupt the education of female students and force parents to keep their daughters at home. The lack of responsibility and transparency from the ruling powers in responding to these incidents suggests their involvement.

Education International, in partnership with the Coordinating Council of Iranian Teacher Trade Associations, conducted this research to address discriminatory practices in education and advocate for inclusive and equitable environments for all students.

Methods

Due to the absence of official data on the chain of poisonings, the research methodology involved gathering information from various sources, including news articles from the Telegram channel of the Coordinating Council of Teacher Trade Associations, BBC Farsi, and Iranian news agencies such as Islamic Republic News Agency (IRNA), Iranian Students’ News Agency (ISNA), and Qom News. These sources provided valuable insights and comparisons to construct a comprehensive understanding of the incidents.

Findings

The study reveals that female students in Iran face discrimination and oppression in multiple aspects, such as gender segregation, biased textbooks, early and forced marriages, and restrictive dress codes. These practices limit girls' opportunities and perpetuate gender inequality, hindering their personal and professional growth. Addressing these norms and biases is crucial to creating an inclusive environment that allows individuals to pursue their full potential.

Gender segregation, biased textbooks, early and forced marriages, and restrictive dress codes are among the discriminatory practices faced by female students in Iran.

This research calls for comprehensive reforms to dismantle discriminatory practices and ensure equal opportunities for all individuals, regardless of gender. It emphasizes the urgency of addressing the widespread gender discrimination faced by female students in Iran, which has been described as the "second cultural revolution." By highlighting the oppressive practices and their impact on girls' education and lives, this research aims to attract media coverage and draw attention to the need for change.

Girls' Education

Female students in Iran face discrimination and oppression within the educational system, with practices such as gender segregation, biased textbooks, and restrictive dress codes limiting their opportunities and perpetuating gender inequality. The poisoning of female students during protests in 2022 and 2023 highlights the ruling powers' attempts to suppress resistance and instill fear. Education International partnered with the Coordinating Council of Iranian Teacher Trade Associations to document 358 instances of gas poisoning in girls' schools. The chain of chemical poisoning started on November 30, 2022, during the nationwide protests in Iran for "Woman life freedom."

Chemical Attacks

From December 3, 2022, to April 29, 2023, there were 358 chemical attacks on 325 girls' schools (some schools were attacked multiple times). Deputy Director of Health Ministry, Saeed Karimi, announced on March 13, 2023, that 13,000 students had been treated during the chemical attacks on schools. Additional attacks occurred from March 13, 2023, to April 29, 2023, resulting in more schools being attacked and an increased number of injured students. However, the exact number of injured students has not been announced.

The tables at the end of the report list the schools that were attacked, although some school names were not specified in published reports.

The first peak of poisoning occurred on February 6, 2023, with 13 schools being attacked. On March 1, 38 schools were attacked, and the highest peak of poisoning was on March 5, when 50 schools were attacked.

Tehran province had the highest number of chemical attacks with 54, followed by Qom province with 52. Ardabil had 25 attacks and Khuzestan 27 attacks, while Isfahan had 23 and Kermanshah 22. Kurdistan had 21 attacks. Bushehr, Central, Hormozgan, Sistan and Baluchistan, and South Khorasan provinces were attacked once during this period. There were no reports of chemical attacks in Kerman and Ilam provinces. Ahmadiyya School in Lorestan Province, Meraj and Baharan Schools in Ardabil Province, and Shahid Razavieh School in Qom were attacked three times.

Although the results of students' medical tests are not accessible, they reported experiencing several physical symptoms after the attacks. These symptoms included sore eyes, difficulty breathing (dyspnea), sore throat, nausea, vomiting, severe headaches, stomachaches, dizziness, low blood pressure, weak legs, and heart palpitations.

The poisoning agent had distinct smells resembling tangerine, pepper spray, tear gas, rotten eggs, and a combination of Vitex (chaste tree) and detergent.

The poisoning agent had distinct smells resembling tangerine, pepper spray, tear gas, rotten eggs, and a combination of Vitex (chaste tree) and detergent. These smells collectively define the distinctive olfactory profile of the poisoning agent.

The ruling powers demonstrated a notable lack of responsibility by failing to provide a clear and transparent response to this alarming situation. The poisoning of girls' schools aimed to suppress resistance and instill fear in families, leading parents to keep their daughters at home and disrupting their education for a certain period.

Female students in Iran face significant discrimination and oppression as a result of religious political movements and the establishment of an authoritarian regime following the Islamic Revolution of 1979. These discriminatory practices extend beyond gender to encompass social class, ethnicity, nationality, and other factors, creating barriers within the educational system for female students. Gender segregation, biased textbooks, early and forced marriages, and restrictive dress codes are among the discriminatory practices faced by female students in Iran.

The removal of girls' pictures from textbooks erases their representation and reinforces gender stereotypes and bias towards men. Iranian textbooks depict women as inferior to men, attributing this inequality to biological and psychological characteristics while emphasizing traditional gender roles. Gender segregation in educational settings limits interactions between male and female students, further perpetuating discrimination.

The poisoning of female students during protests highlights the ruling powers' attempts to suppress resistance and instill fear.

Violence and oppression are prevalent, marginalizing women and girls in Iranian society. The poisoning of female students during protests highlights the ruling powers' attempts to suppress resistance and instill fear. Chemical attacks on schools disrupt the education of female students, and the lack of official data and transparency from the ruling powers suggest their involvement.

Addressing discriminatory practices in education and advocating for an inclusive and equitable environment for all students, regardless of gender, is the focus of Education International's partnership with the Coordinating Council of Iranian Teacher Trade Associations.

Urgent attention is required to address the widespread gender discrimination faced by female students in Iran

Chemical Attacks on female students in Iran

Education FACT SHEET

July 2023

This factsheet highlights how Iranian conservative forces oppress the transformative power of education. The report details incidents of chemical attacks on girls' schools, exposing the depths of injustice. Education International, in collaboration with its affiliate in Iran, the Coordinating Council of Iranian Teacher Trade Associations (CCITTA), aims to address gender inequality within the Iranian education system and promote safe and high-quality learning and teaching environments for all Iranians. This study not only raises awareness about the existing problems but also offers potential solutions to bring about positive changes in education. It emphasizes the importance of upholding the rights of both teachers and students with unwavering commitment.
